1 I. INTRODUCTION.

2 Each and every one of the sixteen causes of action asserted by Plaintiff 3 Samantha Suarez (“Suarez”) against Defendants Mountain View Productions, LLC; 4 51 Minds, LLC; 51 Minds Entertainment, LLC; Endemol Shine US Office, LLC; and 5 Endemol USA Holding, Inc. (collectively, the “Endemol Defendants”), as well as 6 NBCUniversal Media, LLC and Bravo Media LLC (erroneously sued as “Bravo
7 Media, LLC”) (collectively, the “NBCU Defendants” and, together with the Endemol 8 Defendants, “Defendants”), stems from the alleged overseas actions of a cast member 9 on the television show Below Deck Sailing Yacht (“BDSY”), Gary King (“King”).
10 Specifically, Suarez alleges that, while filming BDSY in Sardinia, Italy, King made 11 sexual advances toward her in a hotel. Even taking her allegations at face value, they 12 unequivocally demonstrate that Defendants are not liable and that Suarez’s claims 13 should, therefore, be dismissed.<sup>1</sup>

14 The only alleged assault by King (a South African citizen) that Suarez (a 15 Georgia resident) alleges—the conduct that forms the gravamen of the sixteen causes 16 of action in her Complaint—took place thousands of miles away from California and, 17 in fact, outside of the United States. Because this alleged assault is the basis for all of 18 Suarez’s claims, each and every cause of action she asserts is incurably deficient in 19 attempting to apply California law extraterritorially to (1) conduct that took place 20 outside of California and that (2) allegedly injured a non-Californian. Thus, none of 21 Suarez’s causes of action, all of which are brought under California law, sufficiently 22 state a claim.

24
25 <sup>1</sup> Suarez and co-plaintiff Grey Duddleston (“Duddleston”) filed a prior identical action 26 on February 25, 2025, which the Endemol Defendants removed to federal court on 27 February 28, 2025. See Suarez et al v. NBCUniversal Media, LLC et al, Case No.
28 2:25-cv-1774 (C.D. Cal.), ECF No. 1 (Los Angeles County Superior Court Case No.
25STCV05281) (“Suarez I”). Duddleston and Suarez voluntarily dismissed Suarez I on March 24, 2025. See id., ECF No. 12. They refiled a substantially identical Complaint in this action the same day.

1 Even setting aside the bar of extraterritoriality, the vast majority of Suarez’s 2 causes of action separately fail for other reasons. Suarez’s Fourth Cause of Action for 3 gender violence impermissibly seeks to hold Defendants liable as King’s alleged 4 employers for a statutory cause of action that, by the statute’s plain text, “does not 5 establish any civil liability of a person because of his or her status as an employer[.]” 6 Cal. Civ. Code § 52.4(e). Additionally, Suarez’s First, Second, Third, Twelfth, 7 Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and Sixteenth Causes of Action for sexual battery, battery, 8 assault, intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”), false imprisonment, and 9 violations of the Ralph and Bane Civil Rights Acts (the “Ralph Act” and “Bane Act,” 10 respectively) all fail because they rest entirely upon Defendants’ vicarious liability 11 for King’s alleged sexual advances. This misconduct, Suarez concedes, was decidedly 12 personal in nature, and motivated by King’s sexual desire rather than in service of 13 Defendants’ legitimate business interests. See Complaint (“Compl.”) ¶ 65 (emphasis 14 added). Thus, as a matter of law, any such actions are outside the scope of King’s 15 alleged employment. See, e.g., Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Mem’l Hosp., 12 Cal.
16 4th 291, 301 (1995); Farmers Ins. Grp. v. Cty. of Santa Clara, 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1004– 17 05 (1995). For this reason, even if King acted as Suarez now contends, Defendants 18 are not and cannot be held legally responsible as a matter of law.

19 Likewise, Suarez’s Tenth and Thirteenth Causes of Action for negligent hiring, 20 supervision, and retention and negligent infliction of emotional distress (“NIED”) 21 similarly fail to state viable claims. Defendants had no actual or constructive 22 knowledge of past behavior or other factors that would indicate King posed a 23 particular risk of sexual harassment or assault to Suarez (or anyone else).
24 Accordingly, Defendants did not owe Suarez any duty of care, and both negligence-25 based causes of action should be dismissed. See Doe v. Capital Cities, 50 Cal. App.
26 4th 1038, 1054 (1996).

27 For these reasons and others explained below, all of Suarez’s causes of action 28 against Defendants fail to state claims on which relief can be granted. Accordingly,

1 the Court should dismiss Suarez’s claims in their entirety as to Defendants under 2 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure (“FRCP”) 12(b)(6).

3 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND<sup>2</sup>

4 A. Suarez (a Georgia Resident) Worked On Season 4 of BDSY in Italy.

5 Suarez and Duddleston worked as crew members on Season 4 of BDSY, which 6 filmed in Sardinia, Italy in the summer of 2022. Compl. ¶ 2. Suarez worked as a hair 7 and makeup artist on the production. Id. As set forth in the Complaint, both Suarez 8 and Duddleston are, and were at the time of the events alleged, Georgia residents. Id.
9 ¶¶ 15–16.

10 B. According To Suarez, King Assaulted Her at A Hotel In Sardinia, 11 Italy, On The Cast And Crew’s Day Off.

12 On July 3, 2022, a “dark day” when the cast and crew of BDSY were off work, 13 Suarez visited BDSY cast member King in his hotel room. Id. ¶¶ 48, 51. According to 14 Suarez, King allegedly asked Suarez to “climb into bed with” him and to spend the 15 night. Id. ¶¶ 52–53. Later that night, Suarez claims that she returned to King’s room 16 to bring him water and food. Id. ¶ 55. King allegedly “grabbed” Suarez, “held her 17 restrained by her upper body and arms[,] . . . pressed his entire body against her[,] . .
18 . and slam[med] the door shut with both of his hands and his entire body weight.” Id.
19 King also allegedly “press[ed] his erect penis against [Suarez’s] body.” Id. ¶ 97.
20 Suarez found King’s actions so shocking that “[s]he was sure she was about to be 21 raped.” Id. ¶ 55. However, upon Suarez receiving a phone call, King let Suarez go.
22 Id. at ¶ 56.

24
25
26
27 <sup>2</sup> Defendants assume the truth of the allegations in the cited portions of Suarez’s 28 Complaint for purposes of this Motion only and do not concede they are true for any other purpose.

1           C.     Upon Receiving Suarez’s Complaint, The Endemol Defendants 2                       Immediately Reprimanded King, Launched An Investigation, And 3                       Implemented Corrective Measures.

4           Per Suarez, later on July 3, 2022, she ran into BDSY co-executive producer 5 Ryan Veerkamp (“Veerkamp”) “and immediately told him what had ... happened” 6 with King. Id. ¶ 57. Suarez claims that “Veerkamp seemed shocked and asked Suarez 7 if she was okay.” Id. The very next morning, on July 4th, Veerkamp met again with 8 Suarez, “told her that production would speak to King and that what [King] did was 9 not ok,” and “initiated a meeting with the production leadership team.” Id. ¶ 58.

10          Later on July 4th, Suarez met with Veerkamp and other senior members of the 11 production, including showrunner Courtland Cox (“Cox”), to discuss Suarez’s report 12 about King’s behavior. Id. ¶ 59. Cox “apologiz[ed] to Suarez for what had happened,” 13 “vow[ed] to speak with King personally,” and “told [Suarez] in no uncertain terms 14 that King would be fired if something like this happened again.” Id. ¶ 60. Suarez 15 concedes that the Endemol Defendants in fact “warned [King] that he would be fired 16 if something like that were to happen again.” Id. ¶ 7.

17          Cox spoke with King about his behavior later that very same day and reported 18 back to Suarez “that what had occurred was unacceptable.” Id. ¶ 61. Cox also “asked 19 Suarez what she wanted to happen next and told her that production would do 20 whatever she was comfortable with.” Id. Suarez responded that she “wanted no 21 further interactions with” King. Id. Cox “sent Suarez an email memorializing the 22 discussions after the meeting” and “emphasized that if any further issues involving 23 King arose, King would be terminated.” Id. ¶ 62.

24          The Endemol Defendants launched an investigation into Suarez’s complaint 25 against King, pursuant to which the lead investigator contacted Suarez to interview 26 her. Id. ¶ 66. Upon the investigation’s conclusion, the lead investigator reached out to 27 Suarez to inform her that the Endemol Defendants would “be instituting more ...
28

1 [human resources] check-ins on [the] production[] going forward” and “expanding 2 the conversations around sexual harassment and respect in the workplace.” Id. ¶ 83.

3 The Endemol Defendants honored Suarez’s request not to interact with King 4 as part of her job, as Suarez’s Complaint alleges no further interactions with King.

5 D. After Season 4 Of BDSY Wrapped Filming, Suarez Was Not Hired 6 To Work On Another Below Deck Season.

7 After filming wrapped for Season 4 of BDSY, Suarez returned home to Georgia.
8 Id. ¶ 81. After some time, while still in Georgia, Suarez learned that she would not be 9 “invited back” to work on the upcoming Below Deck season. Id. According to Suarez, 10 she “had been placed on a ‘do not hire’ list.” Id.

11 III. THE COURT SHOULD DISMISS ALL OF SUAREZ’S CLAIMS FOR 12 FAILURE TO STATE ANY COGNIZABLE LEGAL THEORY.

13 Courts analyze a complaint’s sufficiency based on its well-pleaded factual 14 allegations as well as “its attached exhibits, documents incorporated by reference, and 15 matters properly subject to judicial notice.” In re NVIDIA Corp. Sec. Litig., 768 F.3d 16 1046, 1051 (9th Cir. 2014). A complaint must be dismissed under FRCP 12(b)(6) if 17 it does not state a cognizable legal theory or allege sufficient facts to support a legal 18 theory. Caltex Plastics, Inc. v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 824 F.3d 1156, 1159 (9th Cir.
19 2016). All of Suarez’s claims fail this test.

20 A. The Court Should Dismiss Suarez’s Action In Its Entirety Because 21 California Law Does Not Apply Extraterritorially.

22 A Plaintiff like Suarez, who is “and at all relevant times was”<sup>3</sup> a resident of the 23 State of Georgia and who relies exclusively on occurrences outside of California (in 24 fact, on another continent) in support of her claims, cannot avail herself of the 25 protections of California law. Indeed, a presumption exists against extraterritorial 26 application of California law. As the California Supreme Court has stated:

27
28

<sup>3</sup> Compl. ¶ 15.

1 However far the Legislature’s power may theoretically extend, we 2 presume the Legislature did not intend a statute to be operative, with 3 respect to occurrences outside the state, . . . unless such intention is clearly expressed or reasonably to be inferred from the language of the act or from its purpose, subject matter or history.

4 Sullivan v. Oracle Corp., 51 Cal. 4th 1191, 1207 (2011) (internal quotations omitted).
5 No state statute, legal precedent, or other authority provides that any of the theories 6 in Suarez’s Complaint apply to actions that occurred on the coast of the Mediterranean 7 Sea, over 6,000 miles away, to a non-California resident, merely because some of the 8 defendants in some form or fashion do business within California. There is simply no 9 nexus between Suarez, her claims, and the state of California. A holding that Suarez 10 can avail herself of California’s laws with these allegations would transform the 11 California court system into the Hague and encourage the very forum-shopping that 12 resulted in the instant lawsuit.

13 1. Suarez’s Statutory Claims Fail Because Those Statutes Do Not 14 Apply Extraterritorially.

15 There is not a single link connecting Suarez’s allegations of harassment, 16 discrimination, or retaliation under the FEHA or the California Labor Code (including 17 the purported non-renewal of her contract and “black-ball[ing]”)—nor her allegations 18 of gender violence or violations of the Ralph and Bane Acts under the California Civil 19 Code—to the State of California. Compl. ¶ 82. Under these circumstances, the Court 20 should dismiss Suarez’s Fourth through Ninth, Fifteenth, and Sixteenth Causes of 21 Action under the Civil Code, FEHA, and Labor Code.

22 The California Legislature did not intend for the FEHA to apply to nonresidents 23 where the alleged unlawful conduct occurred outside of California, without 24 involvement from anyone within the State, as courts and the FEHA regulations 25 confirm. See Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2 § 11008(d)(1)(C) (“[E]mployees located outside 26 of California are not themselves covered by the protections of the Act if the allegedly 27 unlawful conduct did not occur in California, or the allegedly unlawful conduct was 28 not ratified by decision makers or participants in unlawful conduct located in

1 California.”); Campbell v. Arco Marine, Inc., 42 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1852 (1996)
2 (“[T]he FEHA was not intended to apply to non-residents where, as here, the tortious 3 conduct took place out of this state’s territorial boundaries.”). The same is true of 4 Suarez’s claims under the Labor Code and the Civil Code. See, e.g., Daramola v.
5 Oracle Am., Inc., 92 F.4th 833, 843 (9th Cir. 2024) (affirming dismissal of Canadian 6 resident’s claim; “the California laws that [plaintiff] invokes do not overcome this 7 presumption” against extraterritoriality); Hill v. Workday, Inc., 2024 WL 3012802, at 8 *11 (N.D. Cal. June 14, 2024) (“[E]ven under this alternative legal standards 9 framework for extraterritoriality agreed to by the Parties, the Court finds insufficient 10 basis for the extraterritorial application of the California Labor Code.”); id. at *11– 11 12 (applying presumption against extraterritoriality to plaintiff’s Civil Code claims).

12 California courts look to both the situs of (1) the plaintiff’s employment and 13 (2) the material elements of the cause of action to determine if a state employment 14 law should be applied extraterritorially. Russo v. APL Marine Servs., Ltd., 135 F.
15 Supp. 3d 1089, 1094 (C.D. Cal. 2015), aff’d, 694 F. App’x 585 (9th Cir.
16 2017) (collecting cases); Cal. Govt. Code § 12940(h)(1). Neither the situs of Suarez’s 17 employment nor the material elements of her claims occurred in California.

18 Campbell is particularly instructive given the striking similarities to the facts 19 here. In that case, a Washington-resident employee alleged claims for sexual 20 harassment against her California-headquartered employer stemming from conduct 21 that took place on board ships transporting crude oil. Campbell, 42 Cal. App. 4th at 22 1852–53. Although the plaintiff began her employment by flying to California to 23 board her original ship, all of the “harassment of which she complain[ed] took place 24 while the ships were at sea except for one incident which occurred in the State of 25 Washington.” Id. at 1858. Even though certain decisions related to the alleged 26 harasser had been made or ratified in California, the court nonetheless found that 27 “[a]pplying the FEHA in this situation would raise serious constitutional concerns.” 28 Id. (emphasis added). As the court explained, “a line must be drawn between those 1 situations where the law applies and those where it does not. Appellant would have 2 the law applied to all California-based employers regardless of where the aggrieved 3 employee resides and regardless of where the tortious conduct took place. We reject 4 that view.” Id. at 1859.

5 Suarez’s statutory causes of action are predicated on King’s alleged assault of 6 Suarez in Italy. Given the absence of any connection between the alleged misconduct, 7 Suarez, King, and California, the presumption against extraterritoriality applies in 8 full, and the Court should dismiss Suarez’s claims on those grounds. See Russo, 135 9 F. Supp. 3d at 1095 (dismissing sexual harassment claim because the alleged 10 harassment occurred, and majority of plaintiff’s job duties were performed, in 11 international waters).

12 Similarly, as to the alleged discrimination and retaliation (i.e., the non-renewal 13 of Suarez’s contract and alleged placement on a “do not hire” list), Suarez does not 14 adequately allege that any discriminatory act or omission occurred in, or even 15 stemmed from, California. Id. With no connection between these alleged adverse 16 employment actions and California, Suarez’s claims must fail. As stated in Campbell, 17 the FEHA does not apply “to all California-based employers regardless of where the 18 aggrieved employee resides and regardless of where the tortious conduct took place.”
19 Campbell, 42 Cal. App. 4th at 1859.

20 For this reason, it is irrelevant that Suarez alleges that “the decision not to 21 renew Suarez’s . . . employment contract[] in retaliation for [her] disclosures was 22 made in California.” Compl. ¶ 35. This allegation is not only conclusory but also fails 23 to identify the specific individuals who purportedly made this decision, thus falling 24 short of the pleading necessary to establish a California nexus. See Buchanan v.
25 NetJets Servs., Inc., 2018 WL 1933189, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2018) (no 26 application of California law where “Plaintiff does not identify who in California 27 participated in or ratified any of the alleged wrongful conduct”); Gulaid v. CH2M 28 Hill, Inc., 2016 WL 926974, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 10, 2016) (finding that plaintiff

1 did not establish nexus to California where he did not “specifically identify 2 connections between the alleged discriminatory conduct and the activities of 3 particular employees of defendants in California”) (emphasis added); see also Juarez
4 v. Soc. Fin., Inc., 2021 WL 1375868, at *8 (rejecting as “conclusory” the allegation 5 that defendant’s “decision-making . . . occurs in California”).<sup>4</sup>

6 Given the presumption against extraterritoriality applicable to Suarez’s 7 statutory claims and the absence of any connection between California and the alleged 8 non-renewal of Suarez’s contract or placement on a “do not hire list,” Suarez’s causes 9 of action premised upon those alleged acts are legally deficient and should be 10 dismissed.

11 2. Suarez’s Common-Law Tort, Negligence, And Public Policy
12 Claims Also Fail Because They Are Based On Conduct Entirely 13 Outside Of California.

14 The entirety of the alleged tortious misconduct underlying Suarez’s claims<sup>5</sup> 15 occurred in Sardinia and (possibly) Georgia, where Suarez resides. Compl. ¶¶ 41, 48, 16 51–56, 81. Therefore, while there exists some dispute within the judiciary as to 17 whether the presumption against extraterritoriality applies to common-law tort claims 18 under California law,<sup>6</sup> even assuming arguendo that there is no presumption against 19 extraterritoriality applicable to these tort claims, Suarez’s claims should be dismissed.

20 <sup>4</sup> It is also irrelevant that Suarez alleges that she “was required to sign on-boarding 21 documents providing, among other things, that her ‘hire state’ and ‘work state’ would 22 be California,” as “state of employment contract . . . [is] not [a] material element[] of 23 a FEHA claim and insufficient to overcome the extraterritorial presumption.” Rulenz 24 v. Ford Motor Co., 2013 WL 2181241, at *3 (S.D. Cal. May 20, 2013); see also 25 Dfinity USA Research LLC v. Bravick, 2023 WL 2717252, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2023) (“[A] California choice of law clause—without any indication of an exclusion—incorporates California’s presumption against extraterritoriality and consequent implicit geographical limitation.”); O’Connor v. Uber Techs, Inc., 58 F.
Supp. 3d 989, 1005 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 4, 2014) (same).

26 <sup>5</sup> Suarez alleges the common-law tort claims of Sexual Battery, Battery, Assault, 27 Negligent Hiring/Retention/Supervision of an Employee, Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy, IIED, NIED, and False Imprisonment.

28 <sup>6</sup> Compare Russo, 135 F. Supp. 3d at 1096 (“[E]ven though the presumption against extraterritoriality does not apply to common law claims, there are still limits on the extraterritorial application of California law.”) (citing Morrison v. Nat’l Australia

1 To apply California law, Suarez must show that “the conduct which gives rise 2 to liability occur[ed] in California.” Russo, 135 F. Supp 3d at 1096 (citing Diamond, 3 19 Cal. 4th at 1059) (cleaned up). In Russo, the plaintiff asserted a common-law claim 4 for sexual harassment under the California Constitution, which was premised on an 5 alleged sexual advance on a boat in international waters. 135 F. Supp. 3d at 1094–96.
6 The court held that, since all of the misconduct giving rise to liability occurred outside 7 of California, the plaintiff could not avail herself of California law. Id. at 1096.

8 Russo squarely applies here. As in Russo, all of the alleged conduct underlying 9 Suarez’s tort claims—the alleged assault and non-renewal of her contract—occurred 10 in Sardinia and/or Georgia. See Compl. at ¶¶ 13, 57–86. Plaintiff does not allege a 11 single fact in support of any of her common-law claims that occurred in California or 12 even any nexus between her claims and the State of California. For these reasons, the 13 Court should dismiss Plaintiff’s tort causes of action. See Hill, 2024 WL 3012802, at 14 *12–13 (dismissing plaintiff’s IIED claim on extraterritoriality grounds even where 15 some of the alleged underlying misconduct occurred in California because plaintiff 16 worked from Maryland and the majority of the harm was felt there).

17 B. Suarez’s Fourth Cause Of Action Is Statutorily Barred.

18 Suarez’s Fourth Cause of Action for Gender Violence pursuant to section 52.4 19 of the California Civil Code (“Section 52.4”) fails as to the Endemol Defendants 20 because the plain text of Section 52.4 forestalls liability: “Notwithstanding any other 21 laws that may establish the liability of an employer for the acts of an employee, this 22 section does not establish any civil liability of a person because of his or her status 23 as an employer, unless the employer personally committed an act of gender 24 violence.” Cal. Civ. Code § 52.4(e) (emphasis added).

25
26
27

---

Bank Ltd., 561 U.S. 247, 255 (2010)), with Hill, 2024 WL 3012802, at *12 (“The 28 general presumption against extraterritorial application of California law applies [to California tort law], as with other causes of action.”) (citing Sullivan, 51 Cal. 4th at 1207).

1 Suarez does not allege that any of the Defendants personally committed any act 2 that could constitute “the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force” or 3 “[a] physical intrusion or physical invasion of a sexual nature under coercive 4 conditions.” Indeed, Suarez only describes acts allegedly committed by King under 5 this cause of action in her Complaint. See Compl. ¶¶ 124–27.

6 Accordingly, the only possible grounds that Suarez could have for holding 7 Defendants liable for gender violence is in their capacity as King’s alleged 8 employer(s). Yet, Section 52.4 flatly prohibits this avenue of employer liability, as 9 courts repeatedly have recognized. See, e.g., Doe v. Pasadena Hosp. Ass’n, Ltd., 2020 10 WL 1244357, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 16, 2020) (“Section 52.4(e) of the California Civil 11 Code exempts employers from liability on a claim of gender violence for the acts of 12 their employees.”); Doe #2 v. Johnson, 2024 WL 4437725, at *3–4 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 13 2024) (finding that plaintiff “fail[ed] to state a claim” against employer defendants 14 even where she “sufficiently pled a claim for gender violence against” an individual 15 defendant); Greenwald v. Bohemian Club, Inc., 2008 WL 2331947, at *7 (N.D. Cal.
16 June 4, 2008).

17 Thus, the Court should dismiss Suarez’s Fourth Cause of Action with 18 prejudice.

19 C. Suarez’s Tort And Civil Rights Causes Of Action Fail To State 20 Causes Of Action Because King’s Alleged Assault Was Not Within 21 The Scope Of Employment As A Matter of Law.

22 Suarez’s causes of action for sexual battery, battery, assault, IIED, false 23 imprisonment, and violations of the Ralph and Bane Acts—i.e., her First through 24 Third, Twelfth, and Fourteenth through Sixteenth Causes of Action—stem entirely 25 from King’s alleged sexual assault on July 3rd. Setting aside that there is no basis for 26 applying California law to conduct that occurred entirely in Italy, the only way 27 Defendants possibly could be held vicariously liable for King’s alleged actions is if 28 that alleged “sexually motivated physical assault” fell within the scope of King’s

1 employment. Compl. ¶ 65; see generally Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist., 123
2 Cal. App. 3d 133 (1981) (school district not vicariously liable for custodian molesting 3 a student because sexual molestation not within custodian’s scope of employment); 4 Di-az v. Tesla, Inc., 2019 WL 7311990, at *14–15 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 30, 2019)
5 (vicarious liability applies to Ralph and Bane Act claims). Here, Suarez’s own 6 allegations demonstrate it clearly was not.

7 To demonstrate that King’s conduct was within the scope of his employment, 8 Suarez needed to allege facts demonstrating that his actions either were: (a) required 9 or incident to the duties that Defendants employed King to perform; or (b) reasonably 10 foreseeable in light of Defendants’ business or King’s responsibilities. See De 11 Martinez v. CRST Expedited, Inc., 2023 WL 4247701, at *11 (C.D. Cal. May 10, 12 2023) (quotations omitted). Even at the pleading stage, “[t]he burden of proof is on 13 the plaintiff to demonstrate that the relevant conduct was committed within the scope 14 of employment.” Id. at *10. A burden that Suarez cannot meet.

15 As California courts repeatedly have held, in cases of alleged sexual 16 misconduct, vicarious liability only attaches in rare and unusual circumstances not 17 present here.<sup>7</sup> “California precludes vicarious liability for sexual torts not because 18 they are unforeseeable, but because they are virtually defined as outside the scope of 19 employment.” Giovinco v. Soc. Sec. Admin., 2017 WL 11631208, at *7 (C.D. Cal.
20 Feb. 27, 2017) (emphasis added); see also Villalobos v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 2023 21 WL 5108499, at *14 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2023) (“The general rule is that where an 22 employee commits acts of sexual misconduct during the course of his work, such acts 23 are outside the scope of his employment, and no vicarious liability attaches.”).
24

25 <sup>7</sup> Because Suarez’s Fourteenth Cause of Action for false imprisonment arises out of 26 the same alleged sexual misconduct that forms her sexual assault claims, she cannot 27 allege that Defendants are vicariously liable for that cause of action either, for the 28 same reasons. See Compl. ¶ 223; Garcia ex rel. Marin v. Clovis Unified Sch. Dist., 627 F. Supp. 2d 1187, 1201 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (dismissing false imprisonment claim under respondeat superior where it was based on the same incident of alleged sexual misconduct).

1 Suarez's allegations unequivocally demonstrate that King's alleged sexual assault 2 was neither reasonably related to his work nor reasonably foreseeable and, therefore, 3 not Defendants' responsibility as a matter of law.

4 1. King's Alleged Actions Were Not Reasonably Related Or 5 Incidental To The Tasks Defendants Employed Him To Perform.

6 Suarez's allegations confirm that King's conduct had no connection to work 7 whatsoever but rather were "sexually motivated." Compl. ¶ 65. On its own, this 8 allegation confirms that Defendants are not legally responsible for King's alleged 9 misconduct. See, e.g., Lisa M., 12 Cal. 4th at 301 ("[A] sexual tort will not be 10 considered engendered by the employment unless its motivating emotions were fairly 11 attributable to work-related events or conditions"); Monaghan v. El Dorado Cty.
12 Water Agency, 2010 WL 3033780, at *9 (E.D. Cal. July 30, 2010) (no vicarious 13 liability for sexual harassment where "Plaintiff alleges no facts that could plausibly 14 suggest that [the perpetrator] was serving the Agency when he engaged in the conduct 15 at issue"); Lowery v. Reinhardt, 2008 WL 550083, at *6 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2008) 16 (no vicarious liability where alleged perpetrator's actions "were taken solely for 17 personal gratification, were unconnected to his employment, were not incidental to 18 his duties as a physician, and were a substantial deviation from his duties as a 19 physician for personal purposes").

20 Suarez's sole basis for seeking to hold Defendants liable is that King's alleged 21 employment provided an opportunity for the alleged wrongful acts. However, that is 22 plainly insufficient. See id. at *6 n.16 (that the alleged perpetrator's "employment 23 brought him in contact with" the plaintiff, "without more, is insufficient for 24 respondeat superior liability to attach"). Rather, the tort must be incident to the 25 legitimate work duties performed by the employee. See Rita M. v. Roman Catholic 26 Archbishop, 187 Cal. App. 3d 1453, 1461 (1986) (no vicarious liability for priest's 27 sexual assault because "[p]laintiffs could not seriously contend that sexual relations 28 with parishioners are either required by or instant to a priest's duties"); Alma W., 123

1 Cal. App. 3d at 140–41 (no vicarious liability for custodian molesting a child because 2 “[s]exual molestation is in no way related to mopping floors, cleaning rooms, or any 3 of the other tasks that are required of a school custodian”); Shamoun v. Republic of 4 Iraq, 441 F. Supp. 3d 976, 994 (S.D. Cal. 2020) (no vicarious liability for sexual 5 assault or false imprisonment because “sexual relations with—or false imprisonment 6 of—a polling place employee are not required or incident to a polling place 7 supervisor’s duties”); Doe v. Uber Techs., Inc., 2019 WL 6251189, at *4 (N.D. Cal.
8 Nov. 22, 2019) (dismissing complaint that “does not plausibly allege that the sexual 9 assault arose from the assailant’s job to drive Plaintiff to her chosen destination”).

10 Here, King’s alleged actions were in no way incident to his legitimate duties 11 related to performing as an on-camera cast member on BDSY. The alleged July 3rd 12 assault took place on a “dark day,” when, according to Suarez, “cast and crew were 13 off work.” Compl. ¶¶ 48, 51. Suarez’s own characterization of King’s alleged acts 14 underscores just how far outside the scope of his employment the alleged off-camera 15 assault was. See id. ¶¶ 3 (King “lunged towards [Suarez], used his arms to grab her 16 by her upper body, and restrained her with his tight grip around her body and arms. .
17 . . Suarez was sure she would be raped.”), 97 (“The conduct of King in groping Suarez 18 and restraining her while pressing his erect penis against her body . . . constitutes 19 sexual battery.”). Rather, even if true, King’s alleged misdeeds toward Suarez were 20 separate, aberrant events that were a “substantial deviation” from any legitimate 21 duties, for which Defendants are not liable as a matter of law. See Farmers Ins., 11 22 Cal. 4th at 1004–05 (1995) (“[A]n employer will not be held vicariously liable for an 23 employee’s malicious or tortious conduct if the employee substantially deviates from 24 the employment duties for personal purposes.”) (emphasis original); Villalobos, 2023 25 WL 5108499, at *14 (no vicarious liability where “there was no business purpose or 26 benefit to [alleged perpetrators’] actions”).

27 Lisa M. is particularly instructive. In that case, the court found that the 28 employer of an ultrasound technician who sexually assaulted a patient under the guise

1 of medical care only 10 minutes after a legitimate procedure on the patient was not 2 vicariously liable because the technician's actions were not within the scope of his 3 employment. See Lisa M., 12 Cal. 4th at 295 (emphasis added). Although the 4 circumstances of the technician's examination made his sexual assault possible (i.e., 5 by providing the opportunity), the court determined that "[t]he technician's decision 6 to engage in conscious exploitation of the patient did not arise out of the performance 7 of the examination." Id. at 301 (emphasis in original).

8 King's alleged actions toward Suarez were even more attenuated from his 9 duties. Whereas an ultrasound technician's work duties actually may necessitate 10 touching patients' intimate parts while they are already in a state of undress, nothing 11 about King's official duties involved (let alone required) grabbing a hair and makeup 12 artist, pressing his body against her, keeping her in his room against her will, or 13 rubbing his genitals on her. Accordingly, as a matter of law, King's purported assault 14 was not related to his duties.

15 2. Nor Was King's Alleged Misconduct Reasonably Foreseeable.

16 Even setting aside that King's alleged assault was a significant deviation from 17 his duties, any such conduct was not foreseeable from the nature of either those duties 18 or Defendants' enterprise, generally. "[F]oreseeability' as a test for respondeat 19 superior merely means that in the context of the particular enterprise an employee's 20 conduct is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the resulting 21 loss in the employer's cost of doing business." Farmers Ins., 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1004 22 (quotations omitted) (emphasis original). For an employer to be vicariously liable, the 23 employee's sexual misconduct must be "foreseeable, not in an omniscient [sic] way, 24 but in the relevant sense." Rita M., 187 Cal. App. 3d at 1461.

25 California state and district courts repeatedly have refused to assign vicarious 26 liability to employers where an employee's sexual misconduct bore no relation to 27 their job duties or the employer's enterprise. See, e.g., id. at 1461 ("It would defy 28 every notion of logic and fairness to say that sexual activity between a priest and a

1 parishioner is characteristic of the Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church.”); 2 Taylor v. United States, 2013 WL 3223420, at *4 (C.D. Cal. June 25, 2013) (“If sexual 3 acts are unforeseeable in a context where an employee performs work that requires 4 ‘intimate’ physical contact, as in Lisa M., it stands to reason that, a fortiori, sexual 5 acts amidst the physically attenuated interaction of mail delivery are at least as 6 unforeseeable.”) (citations omitted); Rydberg v. U.S. Postal Serv., 2021 WL 1851033, 7 at *4 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2021) (sexual harassment not within mail deliverer’s scope 8 of employment because it “is not a generally foreseeable part of delivering the mail”); 9 Shamoun, 441 F. Supp. 3d at 994 (sexual assault of plaintiff not foreseeable because 10 “[s]exual assault . . . of a polling place employee by a supervisor is not characteristic 11 of facilitating an election”); Lowery, 2008 WL 550083, at *6.<sup>8</sup>

12 Similarly, nothing about Defendants’ business of producing or airing television 13 content would make it “foreseeable” to them that cast members would sexually 14 assault off-camera crew members as part of their duties. Therefore, King’s actions 15 were not foreseeable as a matter of law.

16 3. Defendants Did Not Ratify King’s Alleged Actions.

17 Suarez cannot alternatively establish Defendants’ vicarious liability for King’s 18 alleged assault on the grounds that Defendants “ratified” King’s conduct. See Baptist 19 v. Robinson, 143 Cal. App. 4th 151, 169 (2006). Indeed, Suarez’s own allegations 20 clearly establish that Defendants did not ratify King’s alleged actions but, rather, 21 rapidly attempted to address and correct any misconduct by King and accommodate 22 Suarez. Defendants “warned” King “that he would be fired if something like [the 23 alleged July 3rd assault] were to happen again,” “apologiz[ed] to Suarez for what had 24 happened to her and vow[ed] to speak with King personally,” and “confirmed . . . that 25 _____

26 <sup>8</sup> It is also irrelevant to the foreseeability analysis whether King’s employment may 27 have provided him with the opportunity to allegedly assault Suarez. See Doe v. Uber 28 Techs, Inc., 2020 WL 2097599, at *2 (N.D. Cal. May 1, 2020) (rejecting “argument that the tort here was foreseeable because it is closely related to the nature of Uber’s business and it arose directly out of the opportunities created by Uber’s business operations”).

1 what had occurred was unacceptable.” Compl. ¶¶ 7, 60–61. Further, Defendants “told 2 [Suarez] that production would do whatever she was comfortable with,” and, when 3 “Suarez told them she was uncomfortable being around King and wanted no further 4 interactions with him,” her Complaint shows that production honored that request, as 5 she alleges no further personal interactions with King. Id. ¶ 61.

6 The Endemol Defendants also launched an investigation into Suarez’s 7 complaint, pursuant to which the lead investigator contacted Suarez to interview her.
8 Id. ¶ 66. The Endemol Defendants also undertook corrective policy changes in 9 response to Suarez’s complaint, informing Suarez that they would “be instituting 10 more [human resources] check-ins on productions going forward” and implementing 11 additional training around sexual harassment and respect. Id. ¶ 83.

12 The Complaint thus “does not plausibly allege ratification” because it shows 13 that the Endemol Defendants, by taking clear remedial steps in response to Suarez’s 14 complaint, “did not adopt [King’s] conduct as [their] own.” Garcia ex rel. Marin v.
15 Clovis Unified Sch. Dist., 2009 WL 2982900, at *18 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 2009). The 16 Endemol Defendants’ actions are like that of the defendant in Garcia, where the court 17 dismissed the plaintiff’s ratification argument for failure to state a claim. While the 18 Endemol Defendants did not terminate King, “an employer need not always terminate 19 an employee in order to avoid ratification.” Garcia ex rel. Marin, 627 F. Supp. 2d at 20 1203; see also Ramos v. Los Rios Cmty. Coll. Dist., 2018 WL 626381, at *1 (E.D.
21 Cal. Jan. 29, 2018) (“[T]he omission to dispense with the services of the offender, 22 standing by itself and unsupported by any other circumstances indicating the 23 employer’s approval of his course, is never sufficient to establish ratification.”) 24 (quoting Edmunds v. Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry. Co., 174 Cal. 246, 249 (1917)).

25 Instead, the Endemol Defendants “act[ed] to change the circumstances facing 26 [Suarez] (a form of redress),” just like the defendant school district in Garcia. 627 F.
27 Supp. 2d at 1203. For example, the Endemol Defendants made it so that Suarez did 28 not have to interact with King, much like the Garcia defendant removed the plaintiff

1 from the alleged perpetrator’s classroom. Id. The Endemol Defendants also launched 2 an investigation into Suarez’s complaint against King, “found that [King’s] conduct 3 was unprofessional and unacceptable, and told [King] that his conduct must change 4 or that he would face further discipline including possible termination.” Garcia, 2009 5 WL 2982900, at *18; see also Baptist, 143 Cal. App. 4th at 170 (no ratification where 6 employer instructed employee to stop the acts in question); Ramos, 2018 WL 626381, 7 at *1 (no ratification where “the District investigated and responded to plaintiff’s 8 complaints”).

9 Thus, Suarez decisively has not met her burden to show Defendants bear any 10 liability for King’s alleged misconduct. Accordingly, the Court should dismiss 11 Suarez’s First through Third, Twelfth, and Fourteenth through Sixteenth Causes of 12 Action with prejudice.

13 D. Suarez Cannot Pursue Her Negligence-Based Claims Because the 14 Endemol Defendants Owed Her No Cognizable Duty.

15 Suarez’s Tenth and Thirteenth Causes of Action for negligent hiring, 16 supervision, and retention and NIED also fail because she cannot hold Defendants 17 directly liable for King’s alleged misconduct under a negligence theory. “Recovery 18 for negligence depends as a threshold matter on the existence of a legal duty of care.
19 Duty is not universal; not every defendant owes every plaintiff a duty of care.” Brown 20 v. USA Taekwondo, 11 Cal. 5th 204, 213 (2021) (citations omitted); Ess v. Eskaton 21 Props., Inc., 97 Cal. App. 4th 120, 126 (2002) (“Negligent infliction of emotional 22 distress is not an independent tort; it is the tort of negligence to which the traditional 23 elements of duty, breach of duty, causation, and damages apply.”). Therefore, to 24 allege a claim for either NIED or negligent hiring, retention, or supervision, Suarez 25 was required to plead sufficient and specific facts to establish that Defendants owed 26 her a legally cognizable duty of care.

27 Whether Defendants had such a duty turns on whether King’s alleged actions 28 were foreseeable to Defendants. See Saridakis v. United Airlines, 166 F.3d 1272, 1279

n.8 (9th Cir. 1999) (plaintiff “must prove the element of foreseeability [sic]” to state a NIED claim); Doe v. Capital Cities, 50 Cal. App. 4th 1038, 1054 (1996) (“Liability [for negligent hiring, training, or supervision] is based upon the facts that the employer knew or should have known that hiring the employee created a particular risk or hazard and that particular harm materializes.”) (emphasis added); Acevedo v. eXp Realty, LLC, 713 F. Supp. 3d 740, 803 (C.D. Cal. 2024) (“A claim for negligent supervision requires a plaintiff to allege that a particular risk of harm was foreseeable.”).

In this specific negligence context, whether conduct is foreseeable turns on the “level of probability which would lead a prudent person to take effective precautions.” Farmers Ins., 11 Cal. 4th at 1004 (quotations omitted). Here, Suarez’s allegations demonstrate that King’s conduct was not remotely foreseeable.

Nowhere in the Complaint does Suarez allege that Defendants had any actual or constructive knowledge that King posed a particular risk of sexually assaulting a colleague prior to King’s alleged July 3rd assault of Suarez.<sup>9</sup> Suarez baldly pleads that Defendants “knew or reasonably should have known that King had a propensity to . . . engage in unwelcome, sexually aggressive behavior with coworkers” but fails to allege any facts to support this sweeping contention. Compl. ¶ 189. While alleging that King “had a well-deserved reputation for sexually aggressive behavior and alcohol abuse,” Suarez does not allege that King had any reputation for sexual assault or sexual harassment, merely that he “had hooked up with a number of female cast members in past seasons”—without any facts indicating that such “hookups” were anything but consensual. Id. ¶ 47; see also Capital Cities, 50 Cal. App. 4th at 1054–55 (“[K]nowledge that Marshall used his position of authority to extract or to coerce sexual favors is not knowledge that he would first drug and then attack a potential

<sup>9</sup> Allegations about King’s alleged misconduct following his alleged assault of Suarez are, of course, irrelevant to the question of whether his alleged July 3rd assault of Suarez should have been foreseeable. See Compl. ¶ 73.

1 employee. In the context of negligent hiring, those are qualitatively different 2 situations.”).<sup>10</sup> Suarez’s allegations that Defendants knew or should have known that 3 King “had a propensity to abuse alcohol” and was a “troublemaker” who disobeyed 4 COVID-19 protocols fall even further afield given that they have nothing to do with 5 sexual conduct of any kind. Id. ¶¶ 49–50, 189; see Capital Cities, 50 Cal. App. 4th at 6 1054 (“ABC’s knowledge that Marshall personally used ‘serious mind-altering drugs’ 7 does not equate with knowledge that he would surreptitiously use drugs to place a 8 prospective employee into a situation of helplessness before violently assaulting 9 him.”).

10 Because Suarez fails to assert any facts indicating that King had a known 11 history of sexual harassment or sexual assault, she fails to establish that Defendants 12 had any reason to suspect that King would have a propensity for this alleged behavior.
13 See Vizcaino v. Areas USA, Inc., 2015 WL 13573816, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2015) 14 (dismissing negligent retention claim because plaintiff “alleged no facts even 15 suggesting that Defendant had any knowledge of any alleged risk posed by Estoban, 16 and Plaintiff’s conclusory allegations are insufficient to state a claim”); Roman 17 Catholic, 42 Cal. App. 4th at 1565 (on summary judgment, finding church was not 18 negligent in hiring a priest who sexually abused the plaintiff because “[t]here is 19 nothing in the record to indicate [the priest] had a criminal history or had been 20 previously implicated in sexual abuse”).

21 Accordingly, because Suarez cannot satisfy the “duty” element of her 22 negligence claims, the Court should dismiss both of her negligence-based causes of 23 action.

24
25
26
27 <sup>10</sup> Suarez’s allegations that a different “male cast member . . . repeatedly harassed” 28 her have no bearing on whether King’s alleged conduct was foreseeable. Compl. ¶ 46.

1 IV. THE COURT SHOULD DISMISS SUAREZ’S CLAIMS WITH 2 PREJUDICE BECAUSE NO AMENDMENT CAN SAVE THEM.

3 Each and every one of Suarez’s claims clearly and unavoidably fail, and no 4 amendment can save them. Suarez cannot plead away the facts that King’s alleged 5 conduct took place in Italy, that she is a Georgia resident, or that King’s job duties 6 conclusively did not involve sexual harassment or assault. Nor can Suarez rewrite 7 Section 52.4 to overcome its statutory prohibition against employer liability.
8 Accordingly, because Suarez’s claims “could not be saved by any amendment,” the 9 Court should dismiss them with prejudice. Gadda v. State Bar of Cal., 511 F.3d 933, 10 939 (9th Cir. 2007) (quotations omitted).

11 V. CONCLUSION

12 Suarez has failed to allege cognizable claims or sufficient facts in support of 13 all sixteen causes of action asserted on her behalf in the Complaint. Therefore, the 14 Court should grant this Motion and dismiss these claims with prejudice.
